

D 0.1 Main project web site

The Web4health web site:

English

Svenska

Deutsch

Greek

KOM2002 is an EU-funded research project with the aim of developing a web site with answers to questions about psychology and life style.

The Web4health web site started operation in English on 1 July, 2003 (other languages will follow soon), and provides the following services:

Answers

Answers to hundreds of different questions about life-style problems, obesity and overweight, eating disorders, post-traumatic stress syndrome (PTSS), workplace problems, child guidance, sexual problems and attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Questions can be written in natural human languages and the computer will find the answer which best matches each question. If no good answer is found, the question can be turned over to a human expert for answering. [\[read more >>\]](#)

Experts

The KOM2002 content is developed by psychiatric and psychological experts from Germany, Greece, Italy, Netherlands and Sweden. The software is developed by KTH technical university in Stockholm, Sweden and by Omega Generation SRL, Bologna, Italy.

Forums

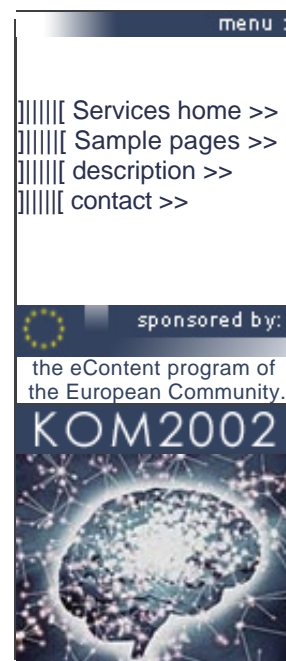

Where you can discuss with other people and ask questions to experts about psychological health. You can participate anonymously, so that you can discuss your problems without telling other people who you are. For its own development, the system is using a content-management system with special support for forums in which experts can discuss each web page while developing it. [\[read more >>\]](#)

Quality and Privacy

Your privacy and the quality of our information is controlled by strict privacy and quality guidelines. We will not divulge who you are to anyone unless we are forced to by legal action, and all content will be checked by medical partners in different countries before it is published.

eContent

